Domino Rally!
By: Robert Orren

Do you remember Domino Rally? (Actually, I think it may have been called Domino Track when I was a kid). It was a set of brightly colored dominoes to be set up only to knock all of them down. It was one of those activities that would take much longer to set up than to knock down, but it sure was fun to watch. What is really fun to watch is when someone sets up hundreds of thousands of dominoes in very creative ways and then sets them in motion. Many times they even branch off into several different paths in all kinds of directions.

But let me ask you a riddle... Why did the last domino fall? Give up? It's because the one before it fell—and the one before that one. Ultimately it is because the first domino fell. The first domino had a relationship to the last domino even though they never actually came into contact with each other.

Now consider how many people you have influenced—in either a positive or negative way. Just like with the dominoes, you have influenced more people than you have actually been in contact with. You influenced someone who influenced someone else, and so on and so forth. And since each of you has been in contact with numerous other people, your influence has branched off into different directions.

In John 1:35-42, we see several dominoes falling. John influenced more than one person. Andrew influenced more than one person. Peter influenced more than one person. But let's just work backwards from Peter. All of the people Peter brought to Christ were because Andrew first found him. And that was because of John the baptizer's influence on Andrew. And who knows? Perhaps the last domino from that chain has yet to fall. Maybe the last domino from your chain has yet to fall; but the first one must be set in motion. Have a great week and knock down some dominoes!
